Why I’m Proud to Represent IU Kokomo on the Board of Trustees

Indiana University Kokomo is distinguished by many features. The continual strong leadership of its chancellors and Community Advisory Board, as well as the long-standing good relationship between the community and campus, has set a vision that continues to flourish. From the beginning, IU Kokomo has provided its students rich learning experiences that transfer to their daily lives and later life choices. Faculty members are caring nurturers of the intellect and the total person.

One of the first campuses to highlight diversity in programming and speakers, IU Kokomo has reached out to the greater IU family with its annual Enhancing Minority Attainment conference. Its International Day Festival and International Education Week bring together academic and community resources of intercultural knowledge and understanding.

Among the endeavors that endear IU Kokomo to me, the loyalty of its alumni is a most impressive part. When attending an alumni event, the IU pride is palatable, and each alumnus’ sensitivity to his or her own community is heartening. It is obvious that each person feels honored to have attended classes at IU Kokomo.

IU Kokomo has continued to keep its working vision with an eye toward the future while giving its constituents the visibility deserved by so many fine accomplishments. I cannot emphasize strongly enough the importance for us, the IU Board of Trustees, to hear from IU Kokomo’s students, faculty, and alumni about this environment.
